

Partnering with Interface Uganda

ATOORUTH

Ruth comes from a village called Oyam in the North of Uganda, where she lives with her parents, 2 brothers and 1 sister.

One evening Ruth's auntie took her to visit her grandmother and on the way back they took a motorcycle "taxi" which collided with another motorcycle. Everyone survived but Ruth was the most injured because she was seated in front of the driver and was thrown forwards onto her head which was cut badly. Ruth was rushed to Abeya hospital where Dr. Anna, a pediatrician from CoRSU found her in poor condition and brought her to CoRSU Hospital where she has been skin grafted. She is recovering well.

Ruth a day after surgery.

Ruth is being taken care of by her auntie (sister to the father) and they are extremely grateful for the assistance of Interface as without this assistance they could not have come down to CoRSU to receive this treatment
