

Partnering with Interface Uganda

Sophi Namugosa

Sophie's hope is restored

Like any other child in rural Uganda, 8 year old Sophie was seated next to the cooking stones and was adding firewood as instructed by the grandmother. No one anticipated what would befall her that day but this was the beginning of her woes.

While she added firewood, her dress got stuck on one of the pieces, a fire ignited and she accidentally got burnt.

Eseza, Sophie's mother a peasant and single parent, could not afford the costs to treat her daughter.

When Eseza visited CoRSU, she could not raise the bill for the hospital stay and she had given up hope.

But still anticipating on what to do to restore the hope of her child, she was rescued by Interface after it took over the hospital bills.

Eseza is happy that Sophie is getting medical attention at CoRSU.

Sophie too says, "I do not feel much pain like I used to."
